LabTalk FAQs

What is LabTalk?

In this series, experts from around the country discuss the hottest and most difficult topics in pathology and laboratory medicine with an emphasis on lab management and trends in testing, such as the explosion in genetic testing. You will laugh, you will cry, you will learn, and then you will cry again. If it is a topic that makes you think about retiring early, we will talk about it and get you excited to get back to work.

When does the show broadcast?

LabTalk is an innovative take on the traditional webinar and is hosted at Seattle Children's Hospital using experts that fly in to Seattle for the day or dial in from a distant location. For the remainder of 2014, we have 3 additional LabTalks scheduled with more to come in 2015!

May 13, 2014 11:00am-12:00pm (PST)
August 26, 2014 11:00am-12:00pm (PST)
October 7, 2014 11:00am-1200pm (PST)

Where does LabTalk get its content?

LabTalk is comprised of questions that have been asked during previous discussions/webinars within the Seattle Children's Hospital Webinar Series. LabTalk also invites discussion and questions during the session. You are welcome to email labinars@seattlechildrens.org to send in your burning question prior to the LabTalk— the odds are in your favor that your questions will be answered on air and all of our experts will have a chance to comment if you send your questions in ahead of time.

How can I write to LabTalk?

Please submit your questions to labinars@seattlechildrens.org

I love LabTalk, do you have other webinars?

YES, we do! Please visit http://seattlechildrenslab.org/educational-services for the entire list of webinars for the year.

I am interested in sponsoring a LabTalk, who do I contact?

For any information related to sponsorships, please email: labinars@seattlechildrens.org

Avoid lab conflicts like these!
Tune in-to LabTalk today!